The problem with parents is they have a distorted sense of what is right and wrong, say child psychologists. They know what they should be doing, say B.M.P (Babies' Milk Products), the largest wholesale supplier of formula milk and baby foods in India, and advocate a new set of rules that is too simplistic, says child psychologist Dr Manjula Gururaj. "Children are more likely to grow up to be criminals if they are brought up by fathers who abuse and neglect them. Parents today are just giving them a baby bottle and take it for granted that they will turn out fine," she says. "It is not what you are doing, it is not what you are not doing, it is what you are not doing that is worse. Forget the TV and the internet - the single biggest cause of ADD (attention deficit disorder) is not time spent at school but time spent at the television and the internet. "We are offering them products that are cheap and children think, 'All right, if I get my child to do X, Y, and Z, he can have some of these products.' But X, Y and Z are actually choking the child's development, curbing his creativity, damaging his intelligence, and creating behavioural problems. The children's brain is not yet ready for that amount of input. "Children need stimulation from things that are not only fun but that make them think and grow. It is not just the way you are raising your child but the effect that you are having on your environment that is important. "We must put children's needs at the centre and stop the in-your-face parenting that we see everywhere. We must empower them to look after themselves. "We must teach them how to learn - not just how to spell 'the' and 'of' and 'and' but to deal with different problems and to process what is going on in their life. "These things are not taught in schools. Our schools are now the most autism-riddled place on earth. In the next 10 years, one in every 120 children in the US will be diagnosed as autistic, says Fagan. "When I'm out on my walks, the problem is that I see people's problems. If you don't get the big picture, you don't have an ability to manage the complexities 82157476af
